Riley was one of the few of the thirty-four victims which was recognizable. Most were charred beyond recognition.

How the end came was graphically described by one of the survivors, an army captain, himself half blinded by the fierce flames and unable to realize how he himself escaped destruction with his companions. This is his story related Tuesday night:

"We were over the army base and a little more than 200 feet in the air when the trouble started. I know how high we were because I the struck for destruction.

As the highly charged wires brushed the silken sides of the great ship, a ripple of flame crept along its body; a wisp of smoke was discernible. Then she struck the ground. On May 29 an army airplanehuge craft, constructed as a hospital carrier—crashed during a storm be-tween Washington and Langley field, with a loss of seven lives. This trial flight marked the army's heaviest loss up to that time

The Roma crash surpasses anything of its kind in the history of army air service experiments. It undoubtedly will result in congress demanding a thorough investigation and report, with the admitted possibility of denying further appropriations for lighter-than air craft, unless or until there is sufficient helium gas available to render them safe from explosion. render them safe from explosion.

In a report to the navy department from Captain L. H. R. Doyle, of Norfolk, he declared that the heavy death toll was caused mainly by the men being unable to extricate themselves from the burning wreckage. Several bodies were found charred beyond recognition. The dirigible, according to Doyle, was completely destroyed only ognition. The dirigible, according to Doyle, was completely destroyed, only the framework remaining. This, of course, would somewhat hamper a thorough probe of the disaster.

Doyle, however, declared that, had the ship fallen without exploding, the death toll probably would have been small. According to survivors interviewed by Doyle, the snapping or jamming of an "elevator"—the mechanism for raising and lowering the ship—started the Roma on her dive towards the earth. The explosion, he said, followed contact between the huge bag and a 23,000-volt electric wire near the ground.

Had Shown Ability.

The Roma in December had demonstrated its ability to withstand the severest weather when she cruised to Washington from Langley field for her christening here. With only three of her six engines developing maximum power, she successfully fought a forty-five-mile-an-hour head wind and with only two engines working on the return trip she successfully negotiated the 141-mile journey despite a strong cross wind.

The engine trouble resulted in sub-cross wind.

The engine trouble resulted in substitution of Liberty motors for the six Italian Ansald engines with which she was originally equipped. The Ansalds, because of their unusually large cooling surface, were found unsuitable for winter climate and four of them froze during the christening trip from Langley field to Washington and return.

Destruction of the Roma came just as the government had completed plans for her transcontinental flight to be made as soon as weather permitted. On this trig she was to have been under command of Major John G. Tornell. Captain Dale Mabrey, who was burned to death in the Norfolk disaster, was to have been second in command.

Came Last August.

Purchased by the American government for $200,000, the Roma was brought to this country last August when the disaster which overtook the ZR-2, glant dirigible purchased by the United States from England, put a damper on a proposed trans-Atlantic flight for the Roma. The war depart-ment issued the following statement concerning the Roma's construction and purchase:

mitted. On this tri; she was to have been under command of Major John G. Tornell. Captain Dale Mabrey, who was burned to death in the Norfolk disaster, was to have been second in command.

On the trip west the Roma was to have followed the route established for airplanes—passing through Wheeling, W. Va., Columbus, Springfield, Ohio; Dayton, Indianapolis St. Louis, Denver and Los Angeles.

In connection with the flight, the army air service had planned to give the most extensive demonstrations of the effectiveness of the semi-rigid type of airship ever attempted in this country.

Asserting its determination to purchase sites for the bond issue schools at a fair market value, the board of education Tuesday afternoon adopted a resolution serving notice on "real estate operators, speculators and land owners," that the board will not be held up for extortionate prices, but will condemn lots for school purposes, if necessary.

will condemn lots for school purposes, if necessary.

The resolution provides that in the case of land sites for schools or play-grounds, if the board is unable to secure them at a fair market figure, proceedings be instituted through the courts to condemn. Commissioner Carl Hutcheson introduced the measure, stating that the power of condemnation was given by the state law.

Owners Approached.

Joseph Logan, one of the spokesmen, stated that he understood the owners had been approached and had indicated a willingness to sell the tract to the city. He said that the location would be roughly in the center of a circle of about 1,000 homes, the children from which have to walk a considerable distance to school now. He pointed out that a number are sent to the Spring Street school, to reach which they are compelled to cross Peachtree and West Peachtree streets, entailing daily hazards on account of the traffic. A talk giving similar reasons was made by Robert S. Parker. The request was referred to the building committee.

In the first place, Mr. Everett's trio of eggs were notable in that their combined weight was over half a pound. The largest weighed five ounces, and the two smaller eggs weighed two and a half ounces each.

Though inferior in weight, however, the two small eggs are the real freaks of the collection. On the large end of one of these is the head and face of a man, the outlines of which are raised above the surface of the remainder of the egg.

ANYTHING FOR VOTES!

The predicament in which congress finds itself as a result of its fumbling with the soldiers' bonus issue is strikingly illustrated by the "Ding" cartoon on this page

The republican organization is form to pay the veterans of the married or single! world war a bonus out of the nathose who are opposed to the win. bonus is the "paramount" question that is now confronting the

As a matter of fact, that pledge was put into the republican platform solely to catch votes.

The position of the republican congress was truthfully expressed, ago by The Cincinnati Times-Star, a rock-ribbed republican newspaper, owned and controlled by Charles P. Taft, brother of the justice of the United States suoreme court, which concluded an "It's all in the fellow." editorial on "Harding, the Sales Tax and the Bonus," with the following paragraph:

Congressmen and afraid not to pass the bonus beto impose or increase taxation for as to who is to have supervisory pathetic and in a way humorous. Perhaps if individual congressmen had treated the matter in a less interested fashion, they would be less of the items of the municipal bond harassed than they are today and issue. less in danger of being beaten by the bonus issue, whether they vote 'yes' or 'no.'

The republican officeholders, from the president down to the doorkeepers, realize now - what they evidently did not foresee in their frenzy to catch votes in 1920-that the bonus question is loaded with political dynamite, and that the fuse is a-fire!

If they run from it they will be repudiated both for misrepresentation and for cowardice, and that if they carry out their pledge and increase taxes it will have to account to an already inordinately tax-burdened public.

It is a sad case of "be damned you do, and be damned if you

But the party now in power go itself into the hole in which it is now floundering-and it will have to look to itself for extrication.

A MARITAL SERMON.

It isn't because Editor Townsend, of The Dahlonega (Ga.) Nugget, is legally authorized to perform the marriage ceremony and issue the license therefor that he advises the young, who can afford it, to go to housekeeping; but he seems to think that there are comparatively few who cannot

That is, where they are willing to make a moderate start, "act reasonable." and don't expect to move to a mansion on Easy street during the first year or so.

"Being too poor to marry," he says, "is all stuff. It's just with the fellow;" and that takes in his willingness to work for the welfare of a little home and the happi ness of a little wife that makes home something more than a

Editor Townsend makes the point that the young man of today has all the advantages on his side, as compared with those of young men twenty or more years age, in making the matrimonial venture. "We speak from experi ence," he saysWe were working in the printing office for Captain J. W. Woodward at the time for $15 per month. After nothing to get the license with. Captain Woodward let us have the Uncle Cole Ash tied the nuntial knot. We rented a cheap house, moved into it an old-fashioned bread tray (which we still have), a water bucket, gourd to drink out of, a few cooking utensils, one bedstead and three quilts, cooking and warming by fires made from green oine wood packed on our shou a half mile. This was a pretty hard way to travel along the journey of

And now we do not owe a single dollar to anyone, and have 15 cents in the bank and four coppers in pocket, and a burying lot paid for, ready to receive our body when we reach the end of life's journey."

Editor Townsend is a philosopher, from first to last, and has always maintained that one can have happiness of heart and home if one will only seek it in the right way.

It is the result of work, and a spirit of mutual helpfulness, not in wanting, or expecting, the earth for one's portion, but just that little part of it a loving heart calls "Home."

And while a comfortable bank account is of course a most desirable thing to have, the man who hasn't even a dollar to his credit in bank and "doesn't owe a dollar in pledged by its 1920 national plat- the world," is doing pretty well,

Living costs are far and away tional treasury; and many of the up in the scale now as compared veterans and their families and with what they were when Editor friends - all representing votes - Townsend started housekeeping; are demanding that that pledge but they are still within reach of be redeemed, and how to do it the young man who has the homewithout alienating the vote of building spirit and who works to

And they are marrying, and being given in marriage, every day, on very little more than Editor with surprising candor, a few days | Townsend had, when he started to make his very good record for home and happiness.

And the sensible, working, saving ones, are the happy matrimoformer president and now the chief nial winners, just as they are the successful ones in a financial way.

The construction of the viaduc would have been well on the way to completion by now but for the fact that council and the bond commission have been unable to agree upon an engineer to supervise the

Now that the two bodies have agreed to leave their differences to the judgment of a joint committee, this action should end the controversy.

Patience on the part of the pub lic has just about reached the point of exhaustion.

Every day that this work is delayed penalizes hundreds of dependents of working men, now idle, who want employment and who have been for months yearning for this work to begin.

In voting approval of the bond issue, the people of Atlanta paved the way whereby thousands of men might be provided with work.

They expected the city to put into effect their will expressed at the ballot-box.

Every day's delay adds that much to the burden of responsibility that rests on the city.

It is now up to this joint com mittee to get results or to see to it that this work is started!

We Must Now Help Feed as Well as Clothe the World

Editor Constitution: The south has always produced too much coton; on this account the price has always been too low to make its production profitable.

I indorse Mr. Hollomon's articles. That is the way to look upon exercise He advises a reduction of acreage to The proper purpose of regular daily

If this advice is followed the south will produce seven to eight million bales per year, and this will be enough cotton for the next sev-eral years. With this size crop it will no doubt bring $100 per bale. The farmers can raise seven to eight million bales under boll weevil conditions, with the extra expense of poison, cheaper than they raised fourteen or fifteen million bales be-fore the boil weevil arrived; therefore we will receive more profit from a half crop than we will for a full crop.

Diversification of creps has been eached to the farmers of the south for fifty years, but no argument, however strong or convincing, could make them see the wisdom of such a course, and they have continued to raise cotton almost exclusively.

Has cotton production ever been profitable, except for a few years when it brought $150 to $200 per bale? To this question I answer emphatically. No!

The farmers of the south have been raising cotton for the last

The Watermelon Growers' association has already contracted for the sale of their entire production this year, and we are reasonably sure that as soon as the farmers sign the association's membership certificates and contracts, we can get a contract of sale for all the potatoes we can grow this year.

Although it is no longer the fashion to call it such, everybody with any ambition in life endeavors to devote a reasonable amount of time each day to some kind of self improvement, five or six acres to the plow, fer-tilize liberally, plant early, catch the early weevils, pick up squares and use poison:

The proper purpose of regular daily exercise or physical training is not to develop large muscles nor to ac-quire enormous muscular strength, but to improve health. And by health I don't mean just freedom from serious disease. I mean euphoria, a normal metabolism, feeling bully, full of pep. A great many people have something like 70 per cent and fancy themselves well; they need some medicine to increase their health up to 85 or 90 per cent. Exercise is in many cases the right medicine. The great drawback about exercise is that it doesn't come in pill form; and a lesser drawback about it is that it hasn't been featured enough in current literature so most enough in current literature so most of us still neglect exercise. I say 70 per cent is about the aver age standard of health possessed, but not exactly enjoyed, by persons who consider themselves well. From 70 on bele? To this question I answer emphatically, No!

The farmers of the south have been raising cotton for the last fifty, years to clothe the world, and have received for this service barely enough of the actual necessities of life to keep soul and body to gether.

The south has been and is today the poorest section of this the greatest country in the world; all due to the fact that we have depended on one crop—cotton.

The farmers of Georgia are now convinced that they have been pursuing the wrong course, and are ready to diversify their crops—are ready to raise corn, hay, peas, peanuts, potatoes, fruits and vegetables; are ready to raise hogs, cattle and poultry, and if they receive the co-operation, encouragement and a little financial assistance from the business and banking interests of the state of Georgia they will, if

Stanton to Reap Harvest of Love On His Birthday

That Georgia Tech has been selected by the war department as the location for the R. O. T. C. motor transport and signal corps camp for the coming summer, was announced by Major A. L. Pendleton, Jr., commandant at Tech, Tuesday.

Students from the University of Georgia, Louisiana State university, and Louisiana A. & M. college, the University of Tennessee and Georgia Tech will attend. The students will live in the dormitories of the institution and will be under military discipline.

And, as in former years, an almost endless stream of tributes to him, his spirit and his pen will pour into that little office, where so many beautiful lines have been penned by the one who writes his verses because of the happiness that he feels, that his spirit

Some of the birthday anniversary notes will be typewritten-some of these will have familiar notes in pen and ink or pencil at the bottom-some will have traveled great distances over a great net of telegraph wires, some will be penned in bold and some by timid hands. But beyond all these will be the thoughts of a world which will be the thoughts of a world which loves. They will float in unseen and unexpressed by word of mouth or pen. And appreciated as much as any of these will be the simple words which a host of friends right here in Atlanta will pass to Frank L. Stanton. Those kind eyes of his will twinkle merrily, there will be a new note maybe in his jolly laughter, and his outstretched hand will grant others in sincery follows. hand will grasp others in sincere fel-lowship, a fellowship possible only when one's soul is attune with nature, when one loves the world for its own

Such will be the birthday of Frank L. Stanton.

For years Mr. Stanton's verses many of them set to music which has set the world singing, have given him the love of the world. And so the love and cheer he has spread through his pen comes back to Georgia's poet on his birthday anniversary.

August. The ball was started when three prominent Augusta women last week announced for council—Mrs. W. H. Fleming, from the sixth ward; Mrs. W. E. Reeves, from the fifth, and Mrs. W. N. Benton, from the first. Powers that be in "cracker" party circles pointed out today that the entrance of women into the political asiena threatens to put a wrench into the cogs of their wheel. They state that only in "cracker" strongholds have the women offered for council and this means that old-time ward politics will again be a factor in a councilmanic election here.

ATLANTA BASKS IN FIRST REALLY WARM DAY OF 1922

Old Sol turned his smiling face on Atlanta and the south Tuesday, giv-ing this section its first dash of real summer weather during 1922. The thermometer registered 73 degrees at noon and remained there until late in the afternoon, according to C. F. Von Herrmann, head of the local weather

"Indications are that Atlanta will "Indications are that Atlanta will continue to experience mild temperatures for the next few days," asserted Mr. Von Herrmann. "Three or four more days of summer weather will enable the farmers in this section to make strides in preparing their land for early planting. They are considerably behind in this work because of the unusually wet spell that was experienced during first half of February.

"There is danger in store for the peach crop. A few more such days as Tuesday will cause the peach trees to discard their winter clothes and blossom forth in spring raiment. Unless we have more cold days to hold back the fruit trees, they are certain to suffer from belated frosts."

A cold wave is, at present, being felt in the Rocky mountains along the Pacific coast, declared Mr. Von Herrmann. It is headed in this direction, he said, but will probably cause lttle inconvenience upon reaching this section the latter part of this week, be added.

Tuesday's mildness resulted in a general shedding of overcoats and heavy wraps. The main thoroughfares were crowded with pedestrians, especially the fair sex, attired in new spring suits and wearing apparel. The colorful array of spring styles presented a pleasing picture, in contrast to the more or less conservative apparel of winter.

Wednesday's forecast is identical to that for Tuesday, said Mr. Von Herrmann.

Washington's birthday, falling on February 22 each year, is like that "melancholy day" the bard used to sing about:

"The melancholy days have come
The saddest of the year,
A little too warm for whisky
And a little too cold for beer."

And a little too cold for beer."

If the day came a little later in the summer it could be celebrated by playing double headers in the ball parks and by spilling plenic pie on the greensward for the red ants to eat. If it came earlier in the winter George Washington's figure could be built of snow, and ice skaters in some parts of the country could cut pictures of the cherry tree and hatchet on the ice. But as it comes just about now the only thing to do is to go out and listen to a lot of speeches on the splendid example for veracity set by George and how in these degenerate days it pays well in business to tell the fruth once in a while.

It would be a crime to say anything in a Washington's birthday story about the "Father, I cannot lie," incident as even the kids are getting so hard boiled over it that they tell you to "g'wan with that stoff" if you try to spring it.

Everybody that knowe anything knows all about crossing the Delaware on ice; about eating shoe leather gravy at Valley Forge; about "first in war, first in peace and last in the American league," and about Washington pie, so it's of no use to reiterate those old stories. The only thing to do on Washington's birthday is to go out and celebrate. Just

A School Fire Every Day

That is the astonishing average for the United States.

All of these fires mean great danger to property. Many mean loss of life.

And practically every one of them could have been prevented by Concrete construction.

Experience has shown beyond any question that Concrete is the highest type of fire-resistive construc-tion—the kind that saves both life and property. Can you afford to take chances with the lives of your children?

Our free Booklet S-5 tells how school boards all over the country are adopting Concrete construction, and show some typical buildings of Concrete. Send for a copy

Celebrities Join With Hotel Guests In Terrace Dance

A dance at the Georgian Terrace last night was a happy event in the week's social program, and there was a large company. The guests of the hotel, many of whom, entertained groups of guests at dinner before the dance, had invited their friends, and there was also a gay representation of the young set to enjoy the special dance music provided by an orchestra from New York.

Interesting visitors looking in upon

Interesting visitors looking in upon the dance near its closing hour were the celebrated Pavlowa, who is staying at the Terrace during her Atlanta engagement, and who lingered awhile on her return from the Auditorium, and the charming Ruth Chatterton who is likewise a guest at the hotel and enjoyed a bit of the dance after her delightful impersonation of Barrie's "Mary Rose" at the Atlanta theater.

Arthur Murray directed the occasion, and there were present many graceful exponents of the newest ball room dancing of the refined type, which is now as much the really smart thing in society as the graceless dances are declasse.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S

Richard Braband, a successful young lawyer, has suggested a year's leave of absence for his bored wife.

Sally, hoping that she will learn enough of life to become less a butterfly and more a helpmate. She begins by meeting a childhood friend.

Keith Gilbert, always labeled "Dangerous." while on her way to tea with Patricia Loring, a modern flapper, who is out to capture Gilbert.

CHAPTER IX. The Tide of Pleasure.

CHAPTER IX.

The Tide of Pleasure.

Sally's dressing, a delicious and prolonged rite, was interrupted by a telephone call. She half-hoped that it was Keith Gilbert, and it was a surprise when Barbara's voice came to her over the wire.

"Sally dear, why don't you come out here and stay with us tonight—aren't you lonely, the very first night Dick's away?

"Oh—I'm sorry—I can't—" answered Sally, contrite because in her excitement over going to the costume hall with Keith she had not missed her husband at all. "I've made an engagement with an old family friend."

"You might bring her with you," suggested Barbara, hospitably, and Sally shrugsed aside a feeling of guilt as she made more excuses.

Barbara chatted on for several moments, announcing that she and Andy had decided to call their little home "Weeacre," that they were going to have a house warming in a few weeks and wanted Sally to be sure to come, and that Andy was bringing home some new seed catalogues and they were going to spend the evening planning their garden. Sally, eager to finish dressing, made perfunctory replies, and speed back to her dressing table at the first possible moment, but despite her haste, Keith Gilbert was announced before she was ready to see him.

She kept him waiting ten minutes, and then hurried into the long drawing room with the honest regret of a child who is late for a party.

"Giddy, I'm so sorry—I hurried—" she began, as she gave him her hand.

But quite obviously he was paying no

she glanced away in embarrasament;
then, lifting her hand to his lips, he turned it gently and kissed it, in the center of the palm.

In vain Sally tried to meet the

"Don't turn from me, Sally, please—I'm such a lonely fellow, you know; don't kind of pick up the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table." Keith had come a step nearer her, and held both her hands now. "My kissing your hand doesn't mean anything to you, except that you aren't sure Dick would like my doing it—isn't that so? To me it means—well, all the world, all the things I've missed in life."

all the things I've missed in life."

His deep voice moved her, his words carried her along on a tide of sympathy that there was no resisting. Bewildered, she faced him again for a moment, then turned away to catch up the wrap that lay on a chair beside her. Verily, playing with the fire that Glddy Gilbert kindled was going to be thrilling!

His car bore them swiftly over to Fifth avenue and down it toward the hotel where they were to dine; swooping along the wet pavement, pausing when the lights in the traffic towers changed color, and then hurling itself onward again, it reminded Sally, of a swift winging bird. She loved being a part of the city's night life in this way; loved seeing the people in other cars—the glimpses of lighted interiors and chatting groups, or the darkness of other limousines, whose occupants sat closer together. sat closer together.

or other imousines, whose occupants sat closer together.

During dinner Keith talked of the ball; of the well-known artists and theatrical folk whom she would see there, and at the theater he pointed to the exquisite little French girl who was the star, and remarked that she would go on to the dance with a friend of his. He nodded to the hostess of a box party, a beautiful tragedienne, and told Sally that she was one of the patronesses of the affair.

Looking about her at the rest of the audience, the people who would just go home after the theater, or to some cafe for supper, Sally felt a glowing sense of happiness. How nice it was to be embarked on this new life, apart from those who looked on at the actors in its thrilling events but did not participate in them. She glanced up at Gilbert, and found him smiling down at her.

"You're going to love this night. Sally girl," he told her, drawing her cloak about her bare shoulders as they rose to go. With a quick thrill at her heart, she assented.

Jeanne's smile was twisted.

Canby smiled easily. There was malice in his eyes.

"I think I have told you before that I have not any sympathy for women. Your modern woman doesn't need any. She works a man for all he is worth, and throws him aside when she can't squeeze him any drier; or somebody else shows up with a bigger bank account. If, once in a while, she slips up, she gets only what is coming to her. I'm the one who says 'three cheers.'"

"Dear me, are you always so submerged in intrigue that you have to have a discreet secretary?"

He disdained an answer, his gaze turning again to the crowded dining room.

HUSBAND.

Jeanne looked at the ornate clock above the doorway. It pointed to a quarter of three.

She had only two hours' grace. If she didn't have the money in that time, she would have to go back to Madame Julie empty-handed. It would mean that a little gray envelope with a silver crest of the "House of Julie" would be slipped in the mail that night, addressed to Victor Barstowe.

It would mean that she had lost everything on which she had staked her fortune, her happiness, life itself.

She could not let it be!

"Dick," she said desperately, "don't torture me any longer! I am up against it, I tell you! I'm flat broke. I've got to have money this afternoon, lots of it."

His gaze returned to her. He looked at her calmly, inscrutably.

"How much?" he asked, around his cigar.

For answer, she opened her purse, and took from it a slip of paper bearing in figures the total of Julie's bill, and handed it silently across to him.

their own perfumes and toilet waters. It is an interesting and dainty task. Many of my readers possess recipes for perfumes which have been handed down through generation after generation of their families.

One woman once sent me her formula for the famous extract known as Frangipani. This formula has an interesting history, since it has held from the time of the Crusades the name of a famous Roman family, one member of which invented a sweet seented powder and named it after himself. His grandson, a certain Mauritius Frangipani, discovered that by treating the powder with spirits by treating the powder with spirits of wine he could produce a fluid ex-tract. The formula is:

Extract of neroli ... 1 drachm pint of rectified spirits. This is allowed to stand for a week before being poured into bottles for use. A pure extract of pink is made by mixing one ounce of oil of pink in one pint of rectified spirit. If these extracts are diluted slightly with rose water they make excellent toilet waters.

CHAPTER VII.

CHAPTER VII.

Lute Brown had designated the custodian of the treasure to be taken from Alexander in the old mine, and had fixed a rendezvous at a long-abandoned and decaying cabin a remute and thicketed locality. Shortly before dawn. Lute arrived there unaccompanied and expecting to find his man awaiting him. But complications had developed. When the quartet that left the mine last held a hurried conference outside, the squad leader explained that the very essence of precaution now lay in their separating and seeking individual cover. Two of them concurred, but the fellow who had attacked Alexander had become insurgent through drink, chagrin and cupidity. The leader agreed to take this man with him to Lute Brown, and the two set off together: while the other two left them at a fork of the trail. On the way to the cabin, the diagruntled one drank more moonshine liquor than was good for him, and when they arrived there the place was seemingly empty, for Lute had made out that instead of one man, two were approaching, and he had slipped out through a back door. A lantern without a chimney burned in the deserted cabin, and it showed the two newcomers that there was no one waiting there. To the inflamed and suspicious brother this seemed an indication of broken faith.

"So ye lied ter me!" he bellowed in passion. "Hit war jest like if thought. Now I aims ter tek hit all anyself!" And snatching out a knife, he hurled himself on his comrade of an hour ago.

That one alropped the saddlebags and fumbled for his pistol, but before inyself!" And snatching out a knife, he hurled himself on his comrade of an hour ago.

That one dropped the saddlebags and fumbled for his pistol, but before it cleared the holster they had grappled and were stumbling about the room. Lute, watching from without, considered this the moment for intervention, and he appeared in the door with drawn revolver shouting out for an end to the struggle. Unfortunately, it was only his loyal adherent who heeded his voice, and the other, freed from the grip that had so far held him in chancery, stabbed twice before the object of his attack collapsed. Then only, Lute fired. Before that moment he must have fired through his loyal man to reach his traitor. The hesitation was fatal, for the shot missed its target and, in a moment more, Lute, too, fell under the knife.

The traitorous survivor stood for a moment, panting heavily, then, still unsteady of step from his homicidal exertions, picked up the saddlebags, ransacked them with frensied haste and plunged out of the door with the package that bore the spots of red sealing war. When, at the end of much panic-stricken haste, he judged it safe to strike a match, he ripped open the bundle, over which so many men and one woman had fought—and in it discovered only tightly-packed newpon went to consult with Alexander as to the next step. None of them meant to give up after going this far and the men fretted for immediate action, but Alexander to their mystification shook her head. "Not yit," she ruled. "I'm waitin' hyar now fer tidin's thet may holp us."

While they stood in front of her uncle's house, a figure appeared plodding slowly along the roadway, and the girl's eyes were bent on it with a tixed anxiety. It came with such a weary lagging, with such a shuffling of feet and such an exhausted hanging of head that Brent at first failed to recognize Bud Sellers. The left arm hung with that limpness which demotes a broken bone. He was on foot but over his shoulders hung his saddle-bags. He halted and threw them at Alexander's feet.

"My mule got shot out from under me," he halted an arm—hit war a right slavish trip. Open them bags."

Alexander obeyed—and drew out a harcel bound in brown paper, bearing the bright red spots of the bank's sealing wax.

"I reckon men," she said quietly, "I reckon lonely.

One day on her way back from the fields she saw a tall figure lonfing near the front door of her house and, at that distance she thought that it was Halloway. But he turned out to be Jerry O'Keefe. Alexander did not greet him with any great waimth. She was angry with herself because her heart had started suddenly to pounding at the instant when she had imagined this man to be the other. So she nodded coolly and demanded, "What's yore business hyar-about?"

Jerry was here because since he had

Jerry was here because since he had seen her last he had carried no other picture but of her in his thoughts. He had sold his small farm and rented a plot and cabin near by and if there was to be no welcome for him here he had merely sold himself out of a home. But his gray-blue eyes were whimsical, and his mobile lips smiling. He was unrebuffed as he made a counter-

"Ef ye hain't got no business hyar, ye hain't got no business hyar, an'
thet's all that air ter hit."

"Mebbe ye're ther business yorself, Alexander," he suggested and there was a persuasive quality in his voice.

"I'm my own business, nobody

"I'm my own business, nobody else's."

In this mood that had troubled her of late, Alexander was very combative. She was not willing to surrender her code—not willing yet to be treated as a woman.

"I didn't say thet I come without b incess, Alexander. Mebby I hain't stated hit yit."

"Then ye'd better state hit.

"My heart is cold over thar. I come ter borry fire."

This had to do with the isolated life in that land, where, until recently, matches were rare and when the hearth fire died, one had to go to the neighbor's house and hasten back with a flaming fagot for its relighting.

"Ye don't seem ter hev the drive of a man borryin' fire. Why didn't ye ask your near neighbor?"

"It's goin' home, not comin', thet a man's got ter hasten with his fire," he reminded her "I didn't ask my neighbor because—he hain't got ther kind of fire my heart needs, Alexander."

So her suspicion was true! He had.

neighbor because—he hain't got ther kind of fire my heart needs, Alexander."

So her suspicion was true! He had been speaking, not literally, but in the allegory of a suitor, and her gathering wrath burst.

"Then, I hain't got hit fer ye nuther. Let yore h'art stay cold, an' be damned ter ye—an' now begone right speedily."

With pure effrontery the young man laughed. Into his voice he put a pretense of appeal as he calmly stuffed his pipe with tobacco. "Alexander, ye wouldn't deny a man such a plum needcessity es fire, would ye?" he questioned, though even as he said it, he drew from his pocket a box of matches and struck one.

So he had made deliberate and calculated sport of her! She wheeled and went into the house and when she came out her face was pale to the lips, while in her hands she carried a cocked rifle.

"Down yonder lays my fence line." she autocratically told him. "I warns yer nuver ter put foot on this farm ergin—I aims ter see that ye don't—an' when ye starts away don't tarry ter look back, nuther."

Slowly Jerry O'Keefe nodded. One ordered from another's house must obey, but the tinkle had not altogether faded from his eyes, and there was nothing precipitate in his movements.

"All right." he added. 'I'm goin' now, but es fer comin' back some day you're ergoin' ter invite me back.

To spoil the oft-repeated statements of Atlanta sporting writers that there was not an undefeated team in the tournament, two entries Monday came from teams that had not bowed to opposition. They were the University of North Carolina and the Washington and Lee Generals.

The Tarheels' defeat Monday night at the hands of the University of Virginia reduced the list to but one name, the Generals entering the fray with the distinction of not having lost a court battle. over five hundred, if not a single up-per classman decided to run. YOUNG SILVER SHOWS
LOT OF PROMISE.
Some weeks ago when Jackie Carr, the tough third ward champion, was making his professional debut pitted against Young Silver, the Hebrew battler, some sentiment was expressed to the effect that Silver carried no the effect that Silver carried no dangerous punch, simply because he failed to knock the rookie stiff in Yet, about two weeks later "Rabbit"

Palmer, conceded to be the hardest puncher, his weight, in Atlanta, and capable of being favorably compared with any featherweight in the world in this particular department of pugilism, failed to accomplish as much against Carr as did Silver.

against Carr as did Silver.

Through ten terrible rounds, the ward champion took everything Palmer sent his direction, actually inviting the "Rabbit" to hit a bit harder, and not being knocked down a single time during the encounter. In his setto with Silver, Carr went to the canvas four times at various stages of the bout, and while he was not knocked out, he looked very weak at the finish. The truth of the matter is, that there's not a featherweight in Atlanta capable of stopping this Carr. He knows less about boxing than any professional pugilist we ever saw, and it is doubtful if the most patient teacher in the world could give the lad any pointers that would prove valuable, but so far as taking punches goes, he's in a class by himself in this sec-Local railbirds could hardly understand Silver's failure to finish Carr at the Auditorium, but Palmer's fight later with the same tough kid opened a number of eyes hereabouts. Because Carr had never fought professionally before his engagement with Silver it was taken for granted that he would prove the easiest sort of a set-up, but no man with such an iron jaw and good punch can be classed as a chump. We assert now that Silver's show ing against Carr was fine, while we are fairly certain the lad has a good future if he cares to follow pugilism professionally. This is extremely rofessionally. This is extremely oubtful, however, as he is a student at Emory university, the proceeds from his fights here paying most of his ex

CORN ADVANCES; Cotton Breaks After WHEAT DECLINES Rally, Closing at Loss

Chicago, February 21.-Although wheat today scored a new high price record for the season, the market de-clined most of the time, chiefly on ac-count of prospective break-up of the drought in the southwest. Closing quodrought in the southwest. Closing quotations were unsettled, 1c to 15-8c net lower, with May $1.44 7-8 to $1.45 and July $1.26 1-4 to $1.26 3-8. Corn gained 3-8 to 1c and oats finished unchanged to 1-4c lower. In provisions the outcome was the same as yesterday to $1 down.

General expectance of rains in Kansas and other states that for a long while have been without adequate moisture, gave an advantage from the start to sellers of wheat. The fact that tomorrow would be a holiday acted also as an inducement to realize on holdings. For the time being, fresh upturns in Liverpool quotations were practically ignored here. About the middle of the session, however, a leadmiddle of the session, however, a leau-ing crop expert gave publicity to a comprehensive report indicating se-vere deterioration of the winter crop in the territory from Texas to Ne-braska, inclusive. This report brought, about a temporary rush of buying that lifted the market to the highest level of the day. A majority of traders of the day. A majority of traders, nevertheless, preferred to avoid the risk of rain and of any unforesen contingencies while business was interrupted tomorrow. Late dealings, therefore were the retrieval entitles. therefore, were at a material setback

Active exports call was largely responsible for the corn market making a new high price record for the pres-ent crop. One handler said the amounts he could sell were limited only by ability to get the grain load-ed. Shipping demand for oats was relatively slow.

Provisions advanced with hogs, but reacted later as a result of selling which appeared to be for New York account. Prior to the increased sell-ing lard had attained the highest prices yet this season.

While the advances in stocks are attributable, generally speaking, to pool or group buying, and while that explanation may be superficially true, the fundamental reasons for the ability of the market to hold its advances seems to lie in the fact that the rise in values is becoming international and that the London and Paris markets reflect a much more cheerful tone. Also the jump in wheat prices is by no means an inconsiderable factor in stock market sentiment.

The rise in call money is considered to be nothing more than a temporary flurry. In view of Secretary Mellon's declaration, it is doubtful that there will be a reduction in the New York federal reserve rediscount rate this week, as some traders had expected.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS

ON COTTON SITUATION

New York, February 21.—(Special.)—The Liverpool market was lower today, as the immediate demand from Manchester seems to have been filled for the moment. Heavy liquidation took place here during the first hour, but these contracts were well absorbed and the market, after declining some 30 points from last night's close, ralled and ruled steady around the 18-cent level. After the sharp advance which has taken place for the past two weeks, some reaction would not be at all unnatural, but we see nothing in the long run which would warrant permanently lower prices, but much in the situation which might develop into a demand which would cause very much higher prices. New York, February 21 .- Interest in the cotton market today seemed to center largely on the continued evening up of March commitments. Reports hat unexpectedly large notices in New Orleans had been promptly stopped led to rallies after an early decline here, but after selling up from 17.85 to 18.03, May broke to 17.85 again and closed at 17.91. Liverpool connections. Closing prices showed rallies of sevclosing prices showed raines of several points from the lowest. There appeared to be no very definite idea as to how many notices might be issued here on Thursday, estimates ranging from 15,000 to 50,000 bales.

WHY put up with that nagging backache? You can't be happy when every day brings morning lameness, sharp, shooting pains and that dull, tired, all-worn-out feeling. You want to be well and the best way to get well is to find the cause of your trouble and correct it. Have you given any thought to your kidneys? Very likely a cold, chill or strain has slowed up your kidneys and that's why you have those racking backaches, those stabbing pains, and that weak, depressed feeling. You may have headaches, too, with dizziness and annoying bladder irregularities. But don't worry! Just take things easier for awhile and help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Assist the medicine, too, by drinking water freely, eating lightly and getting plenty of rest, fresh air and exercise. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

T. E. POLHILL, 422 Pulliam street, says: "My back was out of street, says: "My back was out of fix and awful catches took me when I stooped. Across my kidneys I fielt lame and sore. My limbs and feet were often swollen. My kidneys were weak and so out of fix that I had to get up during the night. The secretions were cloudy and filled with sediment. I heard of Doan's Kidney Fills and bought some. They fixed me up, driving away all the backache and swelling, and putting my kidneys in good working order."

MRS. R. V. CHAPMAN, 284 Sunset Ave., says: "My kidneys were causing lots of trouble. At times when I stooped I thought my back would break. I could hardly turn through my kidneys. The pains settled in my head and in the back of my neck. My kidneys were bad-ly disordered and acted too often. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved me wonderfully, and made me well in every way."

H. T. JACKSON, 171 Jones Ave., says: "I had kidney trouble and my back kept made a quick move a sharp pain ran through me, which at times nearly brought through me, which at times nearly brought me down. When I stooped I could hardly raise up again. I would have to sit down and rest before starting to work. My kid-neys were very free in action and I had to get up two or three times and the secre-tions were filled with aediment. Through a member of my family I began to use Dean's Kidney Pills. Doan's fixed me up in good shape."

New York, February 21.—The stock market continued firm during

It is not considered unlikely, however, that there may be some increase in the common dividend some time this year, but this was not confirmed by the officials questioned. Laurens Is Developing Its Poultry Industry

BY L. O. MOSELEY.

Dublin, Ga., February 21.—(Special.)—Approximately $1,000 worth of poultry and more than 8,000 dozen eggs were shipped from Dublin during last week, according to estimates of the several local buyers here today. The price paid for eggs ranged from 27½ cents to 32½ cents per dozen, thus making a total of about $2,400 to reach the pockets of farmers of this county via the egg sales route, and an additional $1,000 from the sales of poultry. This amount of money pouring into the channels of trade and business in this county from a source which, heretofore has played a minor part as a source for revesource which, heretofore, has played a minor part as a source for revenue is the cause of no little speculation as to the possibilities of this particular business during future months and years.

"Have you a little hatchery in your home?" is a question which might be answered affirmatively by many score persons in Laurens county, and as many more, whose reply would be in the negative, could point to a few dozen hens who are endeavoring to outdo the improved methods of hatching little chicks. Indeed, the farmer in this county today with a few laying hens has a small-sized "mint." The owners realize it, and are according this new "industry" every opportunity to develop. The time has not been so long when the poultry on a farm was regarded as merely a "custom," and developed solely for the requirements of home consumption, and it was regarded as "below the dignity" of the average farmer at that time to attempt to dispose of chickens and eggs, the latter particularly, in exchange for other table necessities or merchandise. These same farmers today point to large flocks of chickens and truckers and resort their value. point to large flocks of chickens and turkeys and recount their value in dollars and cents. Thus, "the old order changeth." It is well enough that sentiment has changed, and if it required lean years and necessity to turn the attention of many to a new activity of farm life which offers such splendid revenues, it is worth the experience.

As an evidence of the faith of business men of this section in the egg and poultry possibilities, the amount necessary for the purchase and installation of the largest commercial hatchery in Georgia was subscribed, and the big "hen" is now "sitting" for the first time on 2,400 eggs. In addition to this purely commercial proposition, many individuals have purchased and installed hatcheries of the same type, but of smaller capacities, the machines ranging from 50 to 250-egg capacity. It can be seen, therefore, that the business now is in its infancy and the coming few months will see Lawrence counts "mether". capacity. It can be seen, therefore, that the business active mother-infancy, and the coming few months will see Laurens county "mothering" many thousand little chicks. B. F. Cochran, wealthy farmer and wholesale merchant of this city, who has devoted several years to the production of fine fowls, and who has become one of the strongest believers in the egg and chicken production of this county as a panecea for the financial ills of the people, states that this new business is one of the best paying propositions of which he has knowledge.

"Let me show you how it works out," he said today. "Three hundred day-old chicks of a pure-bred strain will cost a man $100. If he takes care of them and raises the chicks, he will sell enough cockerels and fryers to pay for all they cost him and have 150 or 200 pullets left. In five months these pullets will be laying—just about the same length of time it requires a cotton crop to make. And those pullets will be paying the farmer clear money, dividends I call it, with the eggs they lay. It is one business dividends are collected." It is one business that one is not obliged to wait long until Incidentally, Mr. Cochran's poultry shipments last week were well above the $500 mark. When it is realized that there are about eight active buyers of poultry and eggs in Dublin, and that the business is pretty well divided, the shipments of Mr. Cochran is a fair index to the total business along this line.

The depredations of the boll weevil, the bank points out, will tend to further crop diversification in the southern states.

"Not all of the results of the destructiveness of this insect have been had," the bank says. The recent sharp rise in grain prices is expected to stimulate the demand for automobiles in the farming districts, as the farmers are the largest buyers of cars in the country. It is also predicted that the fertilizer, farm implement and mail order companies will soon reflect the increased buying power of the farmers. These companies have been experiencing some rough sailing during the past few years as a result of depression in the agricultural districts.

"The Law and the Woman."

(At the Howard)

Clyde Fitch's most popular drama,
"The Woman in the Case," pictured under the title "The Law and the Woman," proved a delightful attraction at the Howard theater Monday. It is a Paramount picture, starring Betty Compson in the role of Margaret Rolfe. Miss Compson has one of the most effective emotional parts of her screen career, portraying a courageous and faithful wife who saves her husband from the electric chair by inducing the real criminal to confess, she rises to high dramatic heights.

Overture, "Pagliacci," by Leoncavalle. A synthetic musical revue from celebrated Caruso's opera.

"A Dream," by Bartlett, presented by Perry Bremer with his humanvoice cornet as the prologue.

"Why Adam Walked the Floor," a Tony Sarg Marionette, and the Howard News and Views completes the program.

"Hail the Woman."

their successful engagement with tonight's performances. With character dances and popular song numbers, these four charming little stars have won their way into the hearts of Atlanta theater-goers.

"Old Black Joe Land," a musical episode of old Dixle, is another offering that pleases. All four members of the company are talented and inject considerable comedy into the sketch. The old southern "darky" and "mammy" are realistically portrayed, and contribute liberally to the enjoyment of the act.

Other acts are the Ankar Trio, modern gymnasts; Evans and Sidney, in a monsensical comedy skit, "The Painters;" McGowan and Knox, in a musical number, "A Joy Ride" and Swain's Rats and Cats, intelligent little animals that do some remarkable tricks. The screen feature is William Fairbanks, in "A Western Demon."

"HAIL THE WOMAN"

NOW PLAYING

METROPOLITAN

The Better Films Committee of Atlanta, after viewing "Hail the Woman" at the Metropolitan Theater, unanimously endorses the picture and recommends that it be shown in every community throughout this broad land. "Hall the Woman" not only empha-sizes the injustice of the double standard, but gloriously exemplifies in Judith the higest type of womanhood, the women who have through the ages tended the flame of life and who dying have passed the torch to the next in line. The story and theme are not limited by locale, time or creed. Its deep heart interest grips the audience; each individual character is perfectly drawn;

the technique is without flaw. In her portrayal of the fragile young mother, deserted and despairing, Madge Ballamy proves herself an exquisite artist expressing poignant grief with power and delicacy and rising to great emotional heights. And Theodore Roberts was wonderful, particularly in his final scenes where we see verily that "a little child shall lead them." Our congratulations to Mr. Ince whose vision and courage gave us "Hail the Woman," which after all is but a simple story showing we cannot see says that some one

Providence, R. I., February 21.—
With the arrival of four companies of Rhode Island coast artillery at Pawtucket, following the most serious rioting of the New England conton mill strike, the city was very quiet Tuesday night.

One mar was killed by police riot guns, eight more were shot and a large number of strikers and patrolmen were badly battered and bruised by stones and clubs in a pitched battle at the gates of the Jenckes Spinning company's mill early in the day.

Tuesday night machine sums the shop and the could reasonably be expected of them. Whether the Central of Georgia Railway shops in this city, today voted to go on full time beginning the first of March. For two months they have been working forty hours a week, so that there would be no reduction in the size of the force, the company having given notice of its intention to drop eighty-nine men from the sayroll.

After two months of sacrifice for their fellow workmen, the shopmen, by ballot, decided they had done all that could reasonably be expected of them. Elaborate Affair FULL TIME WORK Marks Rotary's GET VALUABLE LOOT 17th Anniversary

Commemorating the seventeenth an iversary of the birth of Rotary International, one of the most elaborate dinner programs ever arranged by the Atlanta Rotary ciub was held in the salon at the Capital City club Tuesday salon at the Capital City club Tuesday evening. Covers were laid for 350 Rotarians and their friends.

Artistic decorations of flags of allied nations, together with red, white and blue caps worn by men and women alike; jonquils and narcissus adorning the tables beside the candlesticks in which reposed pink candles; Rotary symbols in conspicuous array formed a colorful background to the beautifully gowned women who filled the room. Harry Baisden's orchestra enlivened the occasion with a select mufully gowned women who filled the room. Harry Baisden's orchestra enlivened the occasion with a select musical program. At the outset of the dinner the orchestra, in tribute to Frank L. Stanton, beloved Georgia poet, whose birthday anniversary occurs today, rendered "Mighty Lak a Rose," one of Mr. Stanton's nationally-known lyrics. This was followed by two vocal solos by Solon Druckenmiller, accompanied by Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., at the piano.

Mrs. James H. Whitten's rendition of several vocal numbers and her collaboration with Mr. Druckenmiller in singing two duets was a distinctive feature of the program. Immediately following the dinner, Tom Law, president of the club, introduced 26 young girls attired in the native costumes Principles Outlined.

A brief outline of Rotary and its principles was given by W. R. C. Smith. Rotary is as old as this world itself, asserted Mr. Smith. It began with the first man in his loneliness and it has been rippling and singing down through the ages, sometimes without a name, sometimes hy some other name than Rotary, until today in almost every country of the world, the track of the wheel which typifies Rotary is to be found, he said.

"I like to think of Rotarians scattered throughout the world, unselfishly serving their fellowmen as the new knighthood," declared Mr. Smith. "Not for personal glory or conquest or accumulation of riches; not for possessions nor self-aggrandizement, or pow-Principles Outlined.

sions nor self-aggrandizement, or pow-er; these men have taught and are teaching their fellowmen by their daily-life of unselfish devotion to the affairs life of unselfish devotion to the affairs of their community, their state, their nation and the world, that there is a divinity in man, that he was, in fact, created in the image of God, and that he, who humbly and unselfishly serves his fellowman, is indeed greater than a king. He possesses that which will never die, the greatest jewels of humanity, friendship and service. That is the principle of Rotary."

A number of prominent visiting Rotarians attended the anniversary dinner. Among them were Coloned Fred Alstaetter, of Savannah, president of the Rotary club of that city; Charles Gay, vice president of the Savannah and Atlanta railroad, and Jack F. Jackson, agricultural director of the Central of Georgia railway, directors of the Savannah Rotary club.

In Twenty-six Countries.

In Twenty-six Countries. During its seventeen years of exist-ence Rotary has expanded with phenomenal strides, having at present a total of 1,100 clubs in 26 different total of 1,100 clubs in 26 different countries with an approximate membership of 200,000. The first club was organized in Chicago February 21, 1905. Within three years this club had grown to nearly 100 members. In 1908 the second club sprang into existence in San Francisco. In 1920 the national association of Rotary clubs was formed, consisting of 16 clubs, with about 1,800 members. Two years later at the national convention at Duluth, the first club in Canada, that of Winnipeg, had been organized. The spirit of Rotary has been absorbed in London ere this and application was made for affiliation with the Rotary clubs of this country. Thus Lyerly, Ga., February 21.—(Special.)—Funeral services for James F. Hudgins, aged 69 years, who died Sunday at his home, three miles east of this place, were conducted from the family resided by Rev. J. M. Smith, of Lyerly. Burial was made in the Lyerly cemetery.

Mr. Hudgins was one of the best known farmers of Chattooga county, and had spent all his life in this county, He is survived by his widow; three daughters, Mrs. Carrie Bulsterbaum, of Minters, Texas; Mrs. Sam Anderson. Summerville, and Mrs. Irene White, of Menlo: five sons,

IN FOUR-POWER PACT

Washington, February 21.—Administration leaders in the senate cleared away many of the obstacles in the pathway of the four-power Pacific treaty today by indicating that they would accept without a fight a blanket reservation drafted to cover the objections of those who oppose unreserved ratification.

As presented to the foreign relations committee by Senator Brandegee, republican, Connecticut, and virtually agreed to by those in charge of the treaty, the reservation provides that and a member of the American delegation to the arms conference, are said to have shown general approval of the proposal during the two-hour committee debate, although they held that all reservations were wholly unnecessary. It was also the understanding of some committee members that President Harding, while holding that reservations were superfluous, had indicated he would not oppose a qualification like that presented by Senator Brandegee.

JOHN W. BALE NAMED AUDITOR IN GLENN CASE

Lyerly, Ga., February 21.—(Special.)—John W. Bale, well-known Rome attorney and formerly solicitor-general of this circuit, has been appointed by Judge Moses Wright as auditor in the case of N. K. Bitting and others against Chattooga county, this being a case based on the alleged misappropriation of county funds by A. H. Glenn, tax collector.

The hearing will come up at the March term of Chattooga superior court, which convenes on March 13.

Criticises Detectives.

Mr. Jordan criticised the detective department, charging that it paid more attention to cases where there are rewards involved than it does to cases where human life and property of Atlanta citizens are concerned. "Why if you go to the detectives' office," said Mr. Jordan, "and report a burglary or robbery they will almost yawn in your face. They give most of their attention to cases where rewards are offered and are not concerned with earning their salaries. Some of the detectives instead of making $1,400 or $1,500 a year make around $15,000 by collecting rewards and not paying enought attention to the citizens they are supposed to serve."
